It starts with the Onboarding Phase, where we plan and kick off the project, implement the XM Cyber solution, optimize it to your needs, and train teams.

- Extend your security team with a designated Exposure Management Analyst (EMA) with the expertise needed to continuously improve security posture.
- Proactively drive risk mitigations to your highest risk exposures and prevent attacks.
- Improve your operational exposure management and remediation processes with integrated best practices and tools.

What You'll Get:

- Designated EMA who Identifies exposures and creates a tailored prioritized remediation plan.
- Your EMA will initiate remediation activities with IT and non-security teams ("fixers"), communicate risks and remediation options, and oversee remediation actions.
- Simulations to validate and confirm the attack surface has been remediated and the cyber resilience of the organization is continually improving.
- Monthly management reports to show remediation activities, exposure posture, and a service overview.

What sealed it was the actual communication and support we got and it wasn't just, 'Here, buy this expensive program and good luck.' Now it's almost 2 years to the day and I have weekly meetings, they're finding stuff, we're in contact, it's a partnership.... This is why it's so important for me to have XM as a great support – I can bounce questions off of them, I can Slack them, send emails, and I never have a missed email. Within 40 minutes, I get an email back – that level of support is extremely important."
